Philosophy:

Whether a mediation ends in a settlement or an impasse, parties should feel like they have been heard and understood. I believe that the point of mediation is to allow a productive relationship between the parties moving forward. When I mediate, I do my best to make the attorneys look good in front of their clients. Whether the mediation ends in a settlement or an impasse, clients should feel their attorney is doing everything they can to get them the best resolution, and the mediator should not get in the way of that.
